A Collection of Persian Tales, written expressly for the improvement of young Students, accompanied with an English translation, is now submitted to the candour of the Public.

The learned Orientalist will allow, that, to render into English such subjects with any degree of success, is no pleasant or easy task, on account of the difficulty of accommodating the sense to a different idiom, so as to preserve the spirit of the original, and at the same time avoid the ridiculous extremes of insipidity or bombast; and, therefore, such a critic will readily grant indulgence to a translation, which pretends to no merit but that of faithfulness and perspicuity.

In the Name of the most merciful God!

After bestowing every kind of eulogy and praise on the Creator of heaven and earth, we proceed to set forth the nature and true intent of these pages, which is this. The narrations, tales, and fables of Hazerut Nekhsheby, (the mercy of the Almighty rest upon him!) in the Tootinameh, or Tales of a Parrot, being composed in a difficult and abstruse style, Mahommed Kadery (may God amend his condition!) for the sake of distinctness and illustration, and in order to render them intelligible to all descriptions of men, has written them in familiar and easy language, so as to comprise the epistolary style and ordinary conversation befitting persons of high rank. This is one of the above-mentioned Tales.

TALE THE FIRST.

Of the Birth of Miemun; and of Khojisteh falling in love.

ONE of the princes of former times, whose name was Ahmed Sultaun, possessed much riches and effects, with a numerous army, so that one hundred thousand horses, fifteen hundred chains of elephants, and nine hundred strings of camels of burthen, stood ready at his gate. But he had no children, neither son nor daughter. He therefore continually visited the worshippers of God, to engage their intercession in his favour; and day and night, morning and evening, was himself offering up prayers for a son. After some time had passed in this manner, the Creator of heaven and earth bestowed on the aforesaid king a son, of beautiful form, his countenance resplendent as the sun, and his forehead resembling the moon. From the delight occasioned by this event, the heart of Ahmed Sultaun expanded like a new-blown rose; he bestowed many thousand rupees and huns, or pagodas, on dervishes and fakeers: for three months continuance, tinuance, the omrah, viziers, sages, learned men, and teachers in the city, were feasted; and he gave away costly dresses. When the above-mentioned son arrived at the age of seven years, he was placed under the direction of a master, perfectly versed in every kind of knowledge.

In a short time he read the alphabet, with the Amudnameh, or conjugations of verbs, and by degrees the Insha Herkeren, the Gulistan, Jammia ul Kewaneen, Insha Abulsezul, Insha Yousefy, with the Rukaat Jami; and acquired complete skill in the Arabic and Persian sciences. He also learnt the ceremonies to be observed in the royal council, as well as the rules for conversation and deportment at an imperial banquet; and met with approbation in the sight of the king, and all the nobles of the court.

His father called him Miemun, or auspicious, and married him to a wife, whose body was fair as the silver moon, and her countenance enlivening as the sun. The name of this lady was Khojisteh, or prosperous. Between Miemun and Khojisteh there was such excessive intimacy, friendship, and affection, that every day, from evening till morning, they were inseparable: they slept in one place, and always sat together. day Miemun rode in a palkee to take a view of the market-place, where he beheld a person standing with a parrot-cage in his hand. Miemun said to the parrot-seller, Tell me what is the price of this bird? The parrot-seller answered, "The price of it is the sum of a thousand huns." Miemun replied, "The person who could give so large a sum of money for a handful of feathers, and a cat's morsel, must be an ignorant blockhead." To this, the parrot-seller was unable to give an answer. At that interval, the parrot thought thus to itself, "If this rich man does not purchase me, his refusal will occasion evil and misfortune; for it is only by associating with great and intelligent minds, that the understanding can be improved." Then the parrot thus rejoined: "Oh beauteous youth! endowed with riches, and master of every accomplishment, although I appear in your sight nothing but a handful of feathers, yet, through the power of wisdom and knowledge, I can soar above the sky; and the eloquent are struck with wonder, and are astonished on listening to my sweet discourses. of to-morrow I am acquainted with to-day. Now, for instance, the caravans of Cabul will come to this city, and buy all the spikenard that is in it. Do you purchase all the spikenard in the place; hoard it up, and sell it after the arrival of these travelling merchants, from which traffic you will derive considerable advantage." Miemun, having heard, understood and approved the words of the parrot, gave the owner a thousand huns, the price of the bird; and having bought it, carried it to his own house. He sent for all the spikepard in the city, and asked the sellers the price thereof. The spikenard dealers said, "The price of the whole is ten thousand huns." In the same hour he paid the aforesaid sum from his own treasury, and purchased the spike-nard, which he stored up in one of his palaces. The third day, according as the parrot had predicted, the people of the caravan of Cabul arrived, and made great search amongst the merchants and traders, but could no where find out any spikenard, because Miemun had bought the whole of that article in the city. The people of the caravan came into the presence of Miemun, and having bought the spikenard for the sum of fifty thousand hunns, set out for their own city. At length Miemun was much pleased and delighted with the conversation of the parrot, and bought another bird called a sharuk, or mina, with the view that, by placing it in company with the parrot, the mind of the latter might be freed from the irksomeness of solitude; according to the saying of the sages.

“Kind fly with kind, pigeon with pigeon, hawk
“with hawk.”

The intention of Miemun in placing the sharuk along with the parrot, was, that these birds might be mutually pleased with the company of each other. One day Miemun said to Khojisteh, “I am now “going to perform a journey to a certain country,
“and shall also make a voyage in order to visit “several ports. Whenever you have business to “transact, or any weighty affair occurs, carry your “intentions into execution, without the advice and “consent of the parrot and the sharuk.” After speaking to this purport, he commenced his journey.

Khojisteh expressed great sorrow at the departure of Miemun; and being separated from the possessor of her heart, she neither slept during the night, nor ate in the day. To be brief, the parrot dispelled the sorrows of her heart, by relating pleasant stories. At the expiration of six months, one day Khojisteh, after having bathed herself, and adorned her person, was looking out of a window at the top of the house into the street; when a prince of another country, who had travelled into this city, having beheld the glowing cheeks of Khojisteh, was distracted with love; and Khojisteh also was fascinated at the sight of the prince. The same hour the prince sent a procuress to Khojisteh, privately, with a message, that provided she would only take the trouble to visit his house any night, for four hours, he, in return for this condescension, would present her with a ring estimated at a lack of hunns. At first, however, she did not agree to his proposal: but at length the instigations of the procuress prevailed; vailed ; and she returned him for answer, that as day reveals, and night casts a veil over our actions, she would wait upon the prince after midnight. Early at night, after having arrayed herself in her finest and best apparel, she repaired to the sharuk, and sitting down in a chair, thus reflected in her mind : “ Because I am woman, and the sharuk is also a female, she will certainly listen to my words on the present occasion, and give me leave to visit the prince.” With this persuasion, she represented to the sharuk all the particular circumstances of her case. The sharuk advised her, saying, “ You must not commit such an action, which is considered amongst your tribe as most heinous and disgraceful.” But as love had now gained the ascendancy over Khojisteh, the sharuk’s refusal threw her into a rage. Seizing the bird fast by both legs, she pulled her out of her cage, and struck her against the ground with such violence that the soul took flight from the body, and she expired. Then, full of wrath and indignation, she came to the parrot, to whom she represented all her own desires, with the particulars concerning the sharuk. The parrot was endowed with understanding, and thought to himself: "If I refuse my consent, and raise objections like the sharuk, I shall also be murdered." After making this reflection, he thus addressed himself to Khojisteh, in the softest tone imaginable: "The sharuk was a female, many of whom are deficient in wisdom; for which reason, those who are wise themselves, ought not to reveal their secrets to any of the sex. Be not now uneasy or unsettled in your mind; for, as long as my soul continues in my body, I will exert my endeavours in this business of yours, and will gratify your inclinations. God forbid it should actually so happen! but if this secret of yours should be divulged, and your husband hear of it, I will make peace and tranquillity between you and him, like the parrot of Ferukh Beg." Khojisteh asked, "What is the story of the parrot of Ferukh Beg? Tell it at full length, and you will oblige me."

TALE THE SECOND.

The Fidelity of a Sentinel towards the King of Teberistan.

WHEN the day was entirely spent, and night arrived, Khojisteh arose from the costly couch ; and having called for different kinds of food, and various fruits, ate thereof. She composed her countenance with a benignity resembling the moon ; and, having adjusted her head attire, and put on apparel of rich brocade, came to the parrot for permission to visit the prince.

The parrot said to her, “ Be cheerful, without “ thinking or contriving, for I will be zealous and “ active in your cause, and be the means of intro“ ducing you to the prince’s presence ; but you,

The parrot said, " In a certain city dwelt a military man, who had a very beautiful wife, on whose account he was always under apprehension. The man being indigent, the wife asked him why he had quitted his occupation and profession? He answered, I have not confidence in you, and therefore do not go any-where in quest of employment. The wife said, This is a perverse conceit, for no one can seduce a virtuous woman ; and if a woman is vicious, no husband is able to guard her. Have you never heard the story of the Jowgee, who kept his wife upon his back, and wandered about in the desert ; notwithstanding which, she was guilty of infidelity with an hundred men? The soldier asked, What kind of story is that ?

" The wife began with saying, that, once on a time, a man saw in the desert an elephant with a litter on his back. The man, alarmed thereat, climbed up into a tree. By chance the elephant came under that very tree, and having slipt off the litter from his back, went himself to graze. WHEN the sun sunk beneath the west, and the moon arose from the east, Khojisteh, completely decked and ornamented, went to the parrot to ask leave, saying, "I am ashamed to appear before you, " and that you should have so much trouble for my " sake : you neither sleep nor take rest ; how shall " I thank you for your favours ? how can my tongue " perform and utter it ?" The parrot answered, " I " am your slave, although by no means able to execute any business of yours in a manner becoming " a servant ; however, I will speedily send you to " your lover, and exert myself in your cause, like the " royroyan, whose story you may have heard." ### The Fowler, the Parrot, and her Young Ones.

WHEN the sun sunk into the west, and the moon came out of the east, Khojisteh, with a heart full of anguish, and eyes replete with tears, arose, and went to the parrot for leave. Beholding the parrot full of thought, she said, “Why are you pensive?” The parrot replied, “On your account; because I know “not what kind of lover yours is—whether he will “be faithful to you or not, and act like the parrot “of King Kamrew.” Khojisteh asked, “What is “the nature of the story of King Kamrew’s parrot?”

The parrot began relating the story:—“Once “on a time a fowler threw a net over the nest of a “parrot, and imprisoned therein the parrot together “with her young. The parrot said to her nestlings,

 “ a physician, and perfectly skilled in the profession.
 “ The fowler was delighted at hearing these words,
 “ and said to the parrot, Roy Kamrew, who is “ king of my country, has long laboured under a

The Merchant, and his Wife, who outwitted him.

WHEN the sun sunk into the west, and, it being night, the moon ascended from the east, Khojisteh, with a sad and aching heart, got up and went to the parrot, in quest of leave. The parrot, observing Khojisteh pensive, asked why she was thoughtful? Khojisteh answered, "Because I come to you every night
 " and disclose to you my sorrow ; when then will " be the time that I shall meet my lover? If you give

Four rich Persons who became poor.

WHEN the sun descended into the caverns of the west, and the moon came out of the east, Khojisteh, with aching breast and weeping eyes, went to the parrot, and said, "Alas, you green coat! the sorrows of love overwhelm me; every night you make me lose my time by your admonitions and discourse: I am in love, of what use is admonition to me?" The parrot replied, "My mistress! what a speech is this? However, the words of friends ought to be attended to; and they who refuse to hearken to the voice of friends, will repent it, as a certain person did." Khojisteh desired to hear the story.

The parrot said, "Once on a time, in the city of Balkh, there were four persons, men of property,

How the Jackal was made King, and then killed.

WHEN the sun descended into the west, and the moon rose in the east, Khojisteh went to the parrot to ask leave. Seeing the parrot sitting pensive, she said, "Why are you thoughtful?" The parrot replied, "You are of a great family, I know not whether your lover is also of noble descent. If his family is found to be great, like yours, there can be no harm in forming a friendship with him, nay it is desirable; but otherwise it should be avoided." Khojisteh answered, "Alas! guardian of my secret, you say true; how can I learn his character?" The parrot answered, "A man's virtues and vices are discovered by his conversation; but have you not heard the story of the jackal?" Khojisteh desired to hear it.

TALE THE NINETEENTH.

The Merchant, and how a Person's Mare was killed.

WHEN the sun had gone down in the west, and the moon was risen in the east, Khojisteh put on fine attire, and, going to the parrot, said, "Although I am " able of myself to go to my lover, still I do not think
" it adviseable without your consent, because I rely " on your judgment : be expeditious to-night in giving me permission." The parrot answered, "My " mistress, they who are wise do nothing without
" deliberation; you possess a good understanding,
" and therefore will never act rashly. I am well
" assured, that if any one should choose to act inimically towards you, such will be your management that no misfortune will befall you: just as " the merchant wisely contrived." Khojisteh asked,
" What is the nature of his story?"

WHEN the sun sunk into the west, and the moon appeared in the east, Khojisteh went to the parrot, to ask leave, and said, "O parrot! when will that time arrive that I shall join my beloved? I wish to go, but have not resolution: I know not what kind of fortune mine is." The parrot said, "Alas, my mistress! my heart at this instant bears witness, that I will quickly unite you with your friend; but if you get to your lover, perform all the conditions which friendship requires, neglecting not an item; just as Khaliss and Mukhliss served the king's son, in exact conformity to the duties of friendship." ## TALE THE TWENTY-SECOND.

The Merchant whose Daughter was lost.

WHEN the sun went into the west, and the moon appeared in the east, Khojisteh repaired to the parrot, and sat down, contemplative. The parrot asked, "Alas, my mistress ! why art thou thoughtful to-night ?" Khojisteh said, " Last night these reflections came into my mind—whether my lover is wise or simple, learned or ignorant. If he is silly, his society will resemble death." The parrot said, " My mistress, go this time to the house of your lover, and relate to him the story of the merchant's daughter, in order to try his understanding. If he gives you a proper answer, you may esteem him wise." Khojisteh asked, " What is the nature of the story ?"

The parrot began : “ In Cabul was an opulent “ merchant, who had a beautiful daughter, named “ Zerah (or Venus). Wealthy persons, of every city, “ courted her: but the girl did not approve of any one
 “ of them ; but said to her father, I will marry one “ who is either completely wise, or very skilful. This “ declaration was rumoured throughout all countries.
 “ In one city dwelt three youths, each of whom pos“ sessed a valuable art. These three young men went “ to Cabul, and said to the merchant, If your daugh“ ter requires a man of skill, either of us three can “ assert that character. One said, My art is this :
 “ whenever any thing is lost, I know where it is ; and “ have also a foreknowledge of future events. The “ second said, I can make such a horse of wood, that “ whosoever mounts it, floats in the air, like the throne
 “ of Solomon. The third person said, I am an archer,
 “ and can pierce any object at which I point my “ arrow. The merchant communicated to his daugh“ ter the several pretensions of these three youths.
 “ The daughter said, I will deliberate the matter in “ my own mind, and tell you to-morrow which of جواب این خواهم داد و ازین هر کس یکی را

 قبول خواهم کرد وقت شب دختر از خانه گم شد
 صبح هر چند او را جستند نیافتند هیچ معلوم نشد
 که کجا رفت تاجر پیش آن جوان که احوال کم
 شدن میدانست رفت و پرسید که ای جوان
 بگو تا دختر ما کجا است جوان ساعتی تأمل کرد و
 گفت آن دختر را پری برده است و بر فلان کوه
 داشته آدم بالای آن کوه رفتن نمی تواند تاجر
 دیگر جوان را گفت که تو اسپه از چوب ساز
 و آن جوان تیراند از را بده تا بروی سوار شود
 و بر کوه برود و از تیر پریرا بکشد و دختر را بیارد
 جوان اسپه از چوب ساخت و جوان تیرانداز بر
 اسپ چوبین سوار شده بر کوه رفت و بیک
 تیر پریرا کشت چون دختر را آورد هر سه جوان آن
 دختر را خواستند که بگیری و قضیه آغاز کردند
 طوطی چون این سخن تا اینجا رسانید خجسته را

 “ was ineffectual ; it could not be discovered whither
 “ she was gone. The merchant went to the young “ man who knew all circumstances relative to any “ thing lost, and said, Inform me where my daughter
 “ is ? After an hour’s consideration, the man replied,
 “ A fairy has carried your daughter to the summit
 “ of a mountain, inaccessible to men. The merchant
 “ then addressed the second youth, saying, Make you
 “ a wooden horse, and give it to the young archer,
 “ that he may mount it and ascend the mountain,
 “ and, after having killed the fairy with his arrow, “ bring back the girl. He made a wooden horse, the “ young archer mounted, ascended the mountain,
 “ and having transfixed the fairy with his shaft, “ brought away the young virgin. Each of the three “ claimed her as his right, and disputation com“ menced.”

When the parrot had brought Khojisteh to this part of the story, he said, “ Carry this tale to your “ young woman ought to have been given. If he “ returns you a proper answer, be satisfied in re“ gard to his understanding.” Khojisteh said, “ I “ must beg you will first tell me to whom the girl “ justly belonged ?” The parrot answered, “ To the “ person who killed the fairy, and brought back the “ merchant’s daughter : because the others merely “ exhibited their skill ; whilst this repaired to the “ place of danger, and exposed himself to great diffi“ culties, regardless of his own life.”

The parrot, having finished the story, said to Khojisteh, “ Be expeditious, and go to your lover.” She got up, and wanted to have gone: the cock crowed, morning appeared, and her visit was deferred.

WHEN the sun descended in the west, and the moon arose in the east, Khojisteh went to the parrot to ask leave, and said, "Whenever I may go to my lover, I wish first to make trial of his understanding. If I discover him to be wise, I will strengthen my friendship with him; otherwise I will exercise patience; for the sages have said, that in friendship three things ought not to be trusted: first, friendship with women; secondly, having intimacy or associating with children; and thirdly, the company of 'blockheads.'" The parrot began: “ Once on a time, the son of the king of Babylon, happening to enter an idol temple, there beheld a young woman, the brightness of whose countenance resembled the moon, as did her jetty locks the darkest night; her stature was as erect as the cypress, and her walk graceful as the pheasant: he was instantly smitten with her charms; and, laying his head at the feet of the principal idol in the temple, in a plaintive and feeble tone thus expressed himself, If that young woman should marry me, I will sever my head from my body, and sacrifice it to you. In short, the king’s son sent a message to the girl’s father, and asked her in marriage. Her father gave his consent, and the marriage was performed agreeably to the rites and ceremonies of their respective tribes. In short, the lovers were united. After some days, the father invited his daughter and son-in-law to his own house.  خواهم ماند مردمان خواهند پنداشت که من او را
 کشته باشم اینچنین اندیشه در دل خود بسیار

The Merchant's Daughter, whom the King rejected.

WHEN the sun was set, and the moon risen, Khojisteh, with a downcast countenance, went to the parrot, and said, "O thou possessor of my secret! the sages have said, that a woman without shame is the worst of women:—Now I wish to avoid going to a strange man, and to sit at home patiently." The parrot answered, "My mistress, whatever you say is right; but I fear that if you restrain yourself, your constitution will decline, like the king's." Khojisteh asked, "What kind of story is his?"

The parrot began: "In a certain city was a merchant, who had plenty of money and effects,

WHEN the sun went to the western quarter, Khojisteh, with her eyes full of tears, and an aching heart, went to the parrot and said, "When an Arab went to a rich man, and said, 'I will go to Mecca;' the rich man answered, 'Go.' He said, 'I have not the means.' The rich man replied, 'If you have not money, it is not proper for you to go thither; for God has not commanded those who are poor to go to Mecca.' The Arab returned, 'I come to you in hopes of obtaining some money, and not to consult you on a point of law.'—Thus do you recount to me maxims and fables, when I come merely to ask permission to visit my lover, not to hear advice and listen to stories." The parrot said: “ One day a potter, having drank
 “ a quantity of liquor, was intoxicated, and, falling “ over the pots and pans, cut his face and body.—
 “ The cuts on his face were cured in a short time,
 “ but the wounds in his body left such marks that “ they resembled the scars of a sword or an arrow.
 “ A famine happening in the potter’s town, he was “ obliged to go to another place in quest of service.
 “ The king of that country seeing such kind of scars

The Lion and his Whelps, and how he fostered a young Jackal.

WHEN the sun went to the western quarter, Khojisteh, arrayed in man's apparel, repaired to the parrot, to ask leave. The parrot laughed heartily at seeing Khojisteh dressed in man's clothes, and said to her, "As this is a dark night, you have done well in putting on man's clothes, and coming alone, instead of bringing the slave along with you. To-day, as a parrot, an old friend of mine, was flying, seeing me in the cage, he approached me, and from him I heard a tale similar to that I related to you last night." Khojisteh asked, "What is the nature of it?"

The parrot began : "Once on a time, a lion dwelt in a desert along with his female and two whelps.

The Soldier and the Goldsmith, the latter of whom lost his Life from the Love of Money.

WHEN the sun sunk into the western quarter, and it was evening, the stars appeared, Khojisteh ate some fruit; she combed her hair, and having applied collyrium to her eyes, put on fine apparel, and bedecked her ears and neck with gold and jewels, and then went to the parrot to ask leave, saying, "O thou possessor of my secret, make a sign for me to go!" The parrot said, "Keep in remembrance a maxim of mine—Not to tell one's secret to any one, otherwise it will be discovered; just as the goldsmith's secret was found out." Khojisteh asked, "What is his story?"

" relinquish it altogether, and not even to mention
" the word love in future." The parrot said, "O
" Khojisteh, there is a wide difference between speaking and acting. What relation hath love with patience? and can the lover exist without the mistress? If a woman could live (continued he) unconnected with man, then the queen of Room had remained single; but notwithstanding she had for " years felt an aversion towards man, she at last

TALE THE THIRTY-FOURTH.

The Elk and the Ass, who are both taken Prisoners.

WHEN the sun was set, and the moon appeared, Khojisteh went to the parrot to ask leave, and said, "Thou who art the depository of my secret, I have thus heard—That Omar Abdullah ul Azceez slept neither day nor night. They asked him, Why do not you sleep at some appointed time? He answered, If I should sleep during the night, God would not be worshipped; and were I to take rest in the day-time, my subjects would suffer: therefore I do not take any regular rest. O parrot! I also am afraid that, by obliging my friend, I may lose my husband; and that if I am faithful to him, my lover will be jealous and dissatisfied: I therefore wish to relinquish both, and conceal myself with the veil of chastity." rot said, "Khojisteh, continence is very commendable, but there is a time for all things ; at present, it is as unpleasant as the ass's song." Khojisteh asked, "What kind of story is that?"

The parrot said—They have thus related: Once
 " on a time, an ass had contracted friendship with an
 " elk, and they grazed together on the same spot.
 " One night, in the season of spring, the ass and " the elk happened to be grazing together. All of " a sudden the ass was in high spirits, and said to
 " the elk, In this delightful night, whilst the garden
 " diffuses its sweets, and the air scatters musk all " around us, if I were to sing, how pleasant it would " be! The elk said to the ass, What discourse are " you uttering? You may be able to converse about
 " pack-saddles and fullers, but your voice is harsh
 " beyond all comparison ; what business has an ass
 " with singing? We have got into this garden by " stealth, and if you should now begin braying, the " gardener, being awakened, will call other men to
 " his assistance, when you and I shall be made pri-

It so happened that on that very day Miemun returned from his journey. Upon not seeing the Sharuck, he asked what was become of her ? Khojisteh had not yet opened her lips in order to have given an answer, when the parrot said, “ Require “ of me a relation of all the adventures of the Sharuck and of Khojisteh.” Miemun said, “ Speak !” The parrot related to Miemun, from beginning to end, all the particulars of Khojisteh falling in love with the young man, and how the Sharuck was killed by the hands of Khojisteh. Miemun immediately put an end to the life of Khojisteh.
